Navigating the Digital Landscape: Protecting Small Businesses Against Cyber Threats

As a member of our Gallagher Small Business community, we are committed to raising awareness about the significant cyber threats that small businesses face, especially during October's Cyber Security Awareness Month.

In a recent survey, it was found that 88% of small businesses believed that their business was susceptible to a cyberattack. This opens your business to possible exposure of sensitive information such as credit card details, social security numbers, bank account information, phone numbers and addresses.

Consequently, breaches are not limited solely to the damage suffered by the business itself; customers may also face repercussions, including identity theft and privacy violations. Here are some tips for your small business.
